TEEN-AGE CANADA

By JACK HUTTON

What were the last words spoken by Tarzan as he fell below a herd of trumpeting elephants?

The answer which you know if you've followed the recent craze of "elephant jokes:" — "Who greased that vine?"

Does that get you where you live?

IF you chuckled, you're one of the "in" people who have been laughing all this summer at probably the funniest and most improbable set of jokes invented anywhere—the jokes about the elephants.

No one knows exactly who dreamed up the first one. But the first one I heard was: — "How did elephants get flat feet?" The answer: "From jumping out of trees."

The next question is, "Why don't pygmies go into the forest between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m.?" The answer is that elephants jump out of the trees between those hours — and the pygmies' parents already made the mistake.

Who, I wonder, stayed awake all night dreaming up those lines and other gems like these?

WHAT ELEPHANTS

Question: "What did Tarzan say when he saw the elephants coming?"

Answer: "Here come the elephants." Or this one: "What did Tarzan say when he saw the elephants wearing sunglasses?"

Answer: "Nothing — he didn't recognize them."

Elephants also do social service work of a sort, or so I would gather from this gem:

"Question: "Why do ducks. have big feet?"

Answer: "So they can stamp out ducks on fire."

It's enough to make the mind boggle.

No one, as far as I know, had heard of these jokes last winter. Since then they've swept across both Canada and the U.S. Even the staid New York Times recognized them as a new phenomenon.

VOILA!

I don't know when it happened, but the jokes went international at some point.

Question: "What did General De Gaulle say when he saw the elephants going over the hill."

Answer: "Voila les elephants

LOOK OUT! Here comes a stampede of elephant jokes! Jack Hutton today offers a few that would tickle the ribs of even Tarzan and friend.

Eruption Of Volcano Is Recalled

By DANNIE WHITE

Sometime during the night of March 22, 1944, Mt. Vesuvius erupted sending volcanic ash many thousands of feet into the air and showering this same ash over many miles of the Italian countryside.

At almost the same time a river of molten lava came flowing down the mountainside to engulf a village although the inhabitants had time to be evacuated before their homes were destroyed.

Mt. Vesuvius is generally considered to be an inactive volcano but its history dates back to the times of the Roman Empire. Indeed it is this same volcano which some 2,000 years ago erupted to obliterate the city of what is now known as the ancient city of or the ruins of Pompei.

Some members of the RCAF, including myself, were billeted in a farm house adjacent to the village of Pomigliano which is approximately three miles from Salerno. On the morning of March 23 we were awakened by some of our fellow Airmen who had just returned from breakfast and whom upon entering the room where we slept, somewhat excitely informed us that it was, and I quote, "Raining ashes outside."

This bit of information was met with the usual, get out of here, you crazy so and so. However, our informants were quite insistent and we eventually went outside to look and sure enough out of a hazy sky there was now falling a fine powdery ash.

On the following day, March 24, we attempted to go to Sorrento which is approximately 30 miles from where we were billeted, for a week's leave which we had coming to us. However, we had only proceeded for about 10 or 12 miles when we were forced to turn back due to the ashes on the roads which was still falling and had now reached a depth of about four inches. This ash was of about the same consistency as coarse salt. We were then during the course of duty permitted to take pictures, one of which appears here. On the following day, March 25, we were, after some difficulty, able to reach Sorrento which is just across the Bay of Naples from Vesuvius. Ashes still continued to fall for five more days before subsiding and anyone who went out for any length of time usually returned looking like a coal miner coming up from a shift at the coal face.

Help The March Of Dimes Through The United Appeal

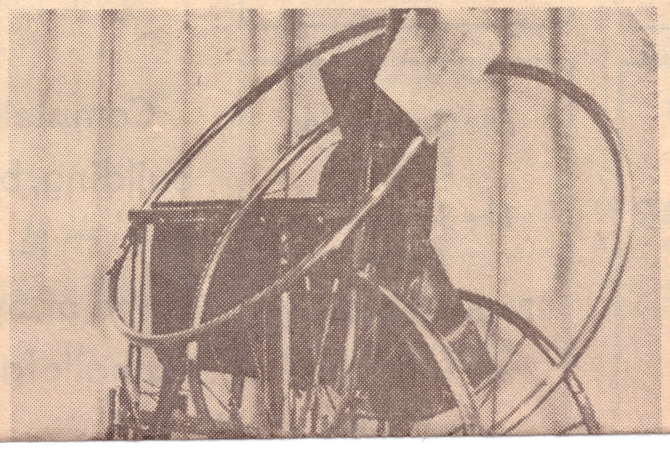
Dear Mrs. MacDonald:

I'm sending my wheelchair back for repairs. The wheels are completely gone. Please repair it and return it quickly because I have no chair and have to crawl around on my hands and knees.

Yours truly,

THE STORY

This letter was written by a man of 45 who has been crippled by polio for 40 years. He weighs over 200 lbs. He has had little education. Before there was a March of Dimes he didn't even have a wheelchair.



Seeks To Give Up Smoking

Roswell Park Memorial Institute, New York state's cancer research centre, embarked this week on a 30-day experimental program to help smokers give up the habit. Among 60 volunteers in the test group is AP staff writer Michael Keating.

By MICHAEL KEATING

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—The seductive object inflaming the imagination of 60 men today is the slim, white tubular shape of a cigarette.

Tortured by this vision are 60 volunteers in the throes of the second day of withdrawal from cigarette-smoking. Our feelings are virtually unanimous—we miss it very much his disability and his lack of education. Hie only income is the small disability pension.

A new chair was delivered a week after this letter arrived.

The battered wheelchair shown above was recently sent to the March of Dimes for repair. Sent by a man of 45 who has been cripplied by polio for 40 years. His only income (is the disability pension). To him the March of Dimes is the difference between, as he himself says in an accompanying letter "crawling around on my hands and knees" or moving about with a certain degree of ease. The chair of course, is beyond repair and a new chair was sent immediately.

The March of Dimes means different things to many people: To the mother of five young children, confined to a wheelchair for life, it means assistance in running her home: To the young Cape Breton girl with a polio crippled leg it means an opportunity to attend university: To the Glace Bay boy with two long leg braces it means medical care, boots, braces and education. Without assistance of the March of Dimes this little boy just couldn't get to school. He even has to be carried to the taxi.

To the paralyzed lady of 35 it means a hoist to lift her out of bed and a wheelchair to move around in. To the polio victim who has paralyzed arms it means an electric wheelchair so that he too can be mobile without assistance.

To many it means an orthopedic surgeon who comes to Sydney monthly to examine polio patients and ensure they are making progress as can be expected: Or the brace maker who accompanies him to measure the patients and to fit properly their braces and specially constructed shoes and boots: Or the clinic nurse, a Sydney resident, who is always available to them.

To the volunteers who operate the March of Dimes in Cape Breton it means a continuing interest in the welfare of polio patients. To the Donors through the Cape Breton County United Appeal it is an opportunity to assist polio crippled children and adults in their rehabilitation and in just living. Only through the United Appeal can you support the March of Dimes in Cape Breton County and without your support their can be no March of Dimes.

SEEK FM LICENCE

PEMBROE, OKnt. (CP)—The Samuel de Champlain High School plans to apply for a licence to begin FM (Frequency Modulation) broadcasting. Aboa $6,000 aorth of radio equipment was donated to the school by two Pembroke firms. Principal John G. Thomson said Wednesday the school likely will apply to the Board of Broadcast Governors for a licence to broadcast on an FM band for "short periods" each day.

Coin Corner

By JACK STEPHENS

There has been plenty of activity around Coin Corner in the past few weeks. It appears that most members are very interested in coin varieties; and why not? The search for varieties has many rewards (not all monetary), all you need is a few rolls of cents or nickels and the fun begins. The old-fashioned "paper chase" or "treasure hunt" has nothing on this.

The idea is to find mint errors or "flukes," then when you find one, save it and try to find another (perhaps you will find a variation of the same one) then begin to list and arrange these varieties, consult your catalogue and if your find has not been recorded then you can feel free to choose a colorful, descriptive name for it.

A few weeks ago we recorded the findings of Mr. LeM. of North Sydney concerning his varieties of the 1962 nickel. We hinted that a keen Arichat collector would be interested; well, he was, and with his permission we will record his findings verbatim:

"You were right, mention the word 'variety' and I'm off and running. Other 1962 five cent varieties I've spotted:

1. A second variety of the recut date with a line running from the bottom of the 6 to the rim.

2. A small cap over the 9 in date.

3. Dripping beaver tail. A perpendicular line from end of tail across water lines with 2 or 3 "drops of water" spaced thereon.

4. Elongated beaver tail. A line extending from end of tail towards rim. An interesting '61 one cent variety to look for is: A brace on the lower left hand side of the crossbar in the last A in Canada. This brace looks exactly like the old-fashioned "lugs" that were used to fasten car wheels, years ago, to the hub. It is not too plentiful."

After reading this enthusiastic account we're sure many members will search their change for further varieties. Let's hear from you!

We have stopped smoking to benefit ourselves and to help Roswell Park Memorial Institute perfect a technique that other smokers might use to drop the habit.

The program has been tried with success on the institute staff. This is its second test.

If 20 of the 60 starters remain non-smokers after six months, Roswell Park will consider its technique successful.

HELPED BY DRUG

We are being helped by lobeline, a nicotine substitute, We take two tablets daily—one in the morning before the cigarette-and-coffee urge is victorious: as it was in my case Wednesday) and another with supper.

We are additionally bolstered by a vial of lobeline lozenges, flavored with enough cinnamon to bite the tongue. These are to use "as needed," that is, when willpower falters under a whiff of your neighbor's cigarette.

The nicotine substitute is expected to reduce the desire for smoking. Roswell Park doctors believe that nicotine is the substance that makes smoking so difficult to quit.

Because of the weight gains some people experience when they stop smoking, each morning we also take a pill to depress our appetites.

MAYBE WE AREN'T

That is, we THINK we are taking those pills—

Only 30 of the 60 volunteers actually take pills that contain lobeline and the appetite-depressant. The other half have pills that contain no drugs. None knows whether he has active pills or fakes.

This is the "control" needed to measure the various factors working on participants.

Dr. Charles A. Ross, directing the experiment, says that in the initial test some institute staff members quit smoking with no aid but fake pills, imagination and will power.

elephants reply to General De Gaulle?"

Answer: "Nothing. They can't speak French."

I'll confess that I've wondered about my own sanity and sense of humor when I watch teen-age friends roar with laughter over samples like this one.

Question: "How do you put four elephants into a car?

Answer: "Two in the front and two in the back."

The technique, I've gathered, is to deliver these jokes with a poker face and yield the answer after just the right pause. If your delivery is too rapid-fire, it somehow spoils the ridiculous effect.

HERE'S MORE

Here are other samples in case you're an "elephant-keeper."

Question: "How can you tell if there's an elephant in the shower with you?"

Answer: "When you can't close the shower curtain."

Question: "Why do elephants wear purple braces?"

Answer: "To keep their trousers up."

Question: "Why are elephants gray?"

Answer: "So you can tell them apart from the blueberries."

That's as many as we can take today. But if you have any other elephant jokes to add to the collection, send them in and we'll include them in the column.

partners had very little confidence in each other, afraid of stopping below game on good hands, either the opener or the responder would jump into game at the slightest provocation. This obviously made for jerky and unscientific bidding. Today all this is changed. The bids of the responder have been given a new meaning which is condensed into the following rule. Any bid made by the responder in a new suit is forcing for one round on the opening bidder. The reason for this is that the person who opens has shown at least 13 points and is likely to make a second bid but the responder needs time to show whether he has a weak or a strong hand, so as not to get the bidding too high, too quickly. To illustrate: the opener bids one spade, you respond two diamonds. The opener must bid again. Suppose he rebids two spades, you now respond three clubs. The opener again is forced to bid because you, the responder, has bid a new suit. Now if the bidding went this way. One heart, one spade, 2 diamonds, 2 spades. Here the responder hasn't bid a new suit but simply repeated his first bid. The opener is permitted to pass this bid if he wishes. He is not forced to bid again. To be a good bridge player you must learn and follow this basic principle. The bidding between you and partner will then proceed smoothly and correctly to help you reach your best contract.

The Puritans termed playing cards the Devil's Picture Book. Many other Ecclesiasts particularly during the early days of cards, spoke quite heatedly against the new pastime. In 1423 the Franciscan friar Saint Bernard of Sienna, in a famous sermon at Bologna, stated that playing cards were the invention of the devil.

A husband and wife pair made a good team and won many tournaments. Their marriage ran into difficulties and became divorced. The husband with a new partner found the tournament trail pretty tough. Winnings were meagre. He repented, proposed again to his former wife. They remarried and lived happily ever afterward. So girls, as a deterrent to divorce sharpen up on your Bridge game.

If partner has bid a suit, leading a doubleton (2 cards) of his suit is considered proper. Otherwise it is not a good lead and should be avoided if possible. Leads from Q-X or J-X are near the top of the don't lead list. It usually results in setting up declarer's side suit for discard of losing tricks.

Dr. Ray Ross and Charlie Munn were prize winners last week. Some of the credit should go to their respective partner wives Thelma and Vera. Behind every successful man there stands a successful woman... Ho Hum Olga Livingstone and Gertrude McSween came in first again. To win so often these girls must be good... The most underrated player in the club is Harris McDonald. He has played with six or more different partners and wins consistenly... John Delaney and Matt hias Gouthro won another first for Glace Bay — hear that crowd roar — closely followed by Don McAdam and Tom Sullivan.

Record Fines In Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda (Reuters)—Bermuda courts are growing fat on fines from "speed hounds" who break the timid 20-mile-an-hour speed limit enforced in most of the colony's 19 square miles.

Radar devices introduced last summer are helping to push revenue from court fines to a Bermuda record.

Until 1946, no cars were permitted on the island. People travelled by horse and buggy, bicycleor on foot. When cars were introduced, the general speed limit was established at 20 miles an hour and it has never been altered.

In Hamilton and certain other restricted areas, the speed limit is only 15 miles an hour.

Anyone travelling more than 20 miles an hour and under 30 is usually fined up to £8 ($24) and has his driving licence endorsed. Persons driving between 30 and 40 miles an hour are banned from the roads for three months and fined £10 ($30).

In excess of this speed, the fine increases to £20 ($60) and a driver may lose his licence for six months or more.

VANCOUVER (CP)—It isn't worth Norman Ryall's time to have a fishing vessel built in Vancouver. so he will have it done in Lauzon, Que.

And he will operate out of Halifax.

Ryall lives in Vancouver and has owned a tuna ship, trollers and crab boats here. He approached the local Benson Brothers Ship Building Company to have a 168-foot tuna boat built here.

But Robert Benson said Friday his company could not overcome the subsidy on fishing vessels in eastern Canada, 10 per cent higher than in the west.

Ryall will become navigator of his Nova Scotia-based ship, to be called the Golden Scarab, and will range as far as the coast of Africa in the Atlantic and the coast of Peru in the Pacific.

GOLDEN JUBI

Completed in 1933, this lovely building, built in the Eastern mosque style, is now the spiritual home of Sydney's 225 Ukrainian Catholic families.

Standing right alongside it, is the Ukrainian Parish Hall . . . completed in 1962 . . . a building that is a credit to Sydney and more especially to the parish itself.

Both the church and the parish hall attest the devotion of Sydney's Ukrainian people to their city and to their religious beliefs.

We take great pleasure in offering our best wishes for continuing prosperity and happiness to our fellow citizens.
